

We build toward a future without criminalization and where everyone can access the healthcare and support they need to live and thrive, free from discrimination, state violence or coercion, family separation, or stigma.

Acknowledgments

This report is the product of collaboration by a large team of researchers at multiple institutions made possible by a generous grant from an anonymous funder. The research is led by Principal Investigators Professor Wendy A. Bach at the University of Tennessee College of Law and Professor Madalyn K. Wasilczuk at the University of South Carolina Joseph F. Rice School of Law and research staff at Pregnancy Justice. Sarah Castillo, a PhD student in Sociology at the University of Tennessee, conducted data analysis. The Pregnancy Justice team includes Lourdes A. Rivera, President, Dana Sussman, Senior Vice President, Fikayo Walter-Johnson, Senior Research Associate, Michele Ko, Project Manager, and Imaan Khasru, Research Assistant.

Researchers and students at several other universities have worked on the team, locating and analyzing state level data. State level teams in Texas and Alabama worked diligently on collecting cases relevant to the study. The Texas research team is from the University of Texas School of Law's Sissy Farenthold Reproductive Justice Defense Project at the Rapoport Center for Human Rights and Justice. The team is led by Cristina I. Ramirez, the Project's Criminal Defense Lead, and Blake Rocop, Project Director. Professor Brittany VandeBerg leads our team at the University of Alabama. In addition, Janet Moore, Emeritus Professor of Law at the University of Cincinnati School of Law, worked with the team in the early stages to plan the research. Students from multiple institutions also worked on this project. They include:

- » University of Tennessee: Martha Schull, Ashlyn Doane, Olutayo Alston, Shayla Stewart, Natalia Lewis, Han Lemberg
- » University of South Carolina: Peyton Little, Izabella Forero, Nicole Lane, Briana Padilla
- » University of Alabama: Lonni Moorer, Jamaya Kelley
- » University of Texas Austin: Amy J. Johnson, Gwynn Marotta
- » University of Cincinnati: Nicole Newton

We would like to thank Janet Levin and Mimi Marton and the students in the University of Tulsa College of Law's Reproductive Justice Practicum and researchers Brancen Gregory and Polina Rozhkova at the Oklahoma Policy Institute for support with data collection. We would also like to thank Rachel Rebouche and Karen Engle for insightful comments on an earlier draft of this report and Michelle Brown, Kasey Henricks, Mishka Terplan and Sarah Roberts for generously sharing their time to consult with us on various aspects of the project. Finally, we would like to thank Scholastica Nguyen for designing this report.